AMERICA WILL ENFORCE OLD NAVAL RATIOS

WILL BUILD TO ANY LIMIT

JAPAN'S OBJECTS SUSPECTED

REJECTION OF REMEDIES STIFFENS WASHINGTON

HOPES FOR HELP FROM BRITAIN

Washington, Nov. 11. Although the United States admits a certain amount of sympathy for the Japanese feeling of inferiority under the present naval ratios, the Government of Washington apparently intends to insist upon its superiority in sea power over the fleets of Nippon.

Although United States expects British co-operation, she will resist the Japanese demands single-handed, if necessary. She will resist any challenge by Japan with a naval building programme of a size which will assure her of superior naval strength, it is intimated.

Monday, the thirteenth anniversary of the opening of the Washington Conference, which settled the naval ratios of the major powers at that time, will find the United States still adamant for a continuation of the peace-promoting balance of power established by the Washington treaties.

The accord at Washington was, and is regarded here, as the last effective piece of peace machinery amid a nationalistic world.

There is a contrast in the Japanese attitude of to-day and of thirteen years ago. In the co-operative peace construction at Washington Japan participated with the fullest equality. But there is wide apprehension among officials and the public to-day over Japan's motives.

CAUSES FOR ALARM.

The causes for the United States' uneasiness are plural. First there was the incident in Manchuria and the conquest of that territory, then the flare-up at Shanghai, which may or may not be justly thought significant. Later there have been the efforts to secure an oil monopoly in Manchukuo, the demands for naval parity, and Tokyo's secrecy in its mandatory rule of the Pacific Islands. These moves are seen here as attempts to evade pacts and as indications of aggressive designs.

It is pointed out that the majority of Americans probably appreciate Japan's susceptibilities from the seeming inferiority of the naval ratio, although they consider it false pride which causes Japan discomfort in view of the French and Italian positions, with extensive coast lines and overseas possessions to defend.

Nevertheless, there is a disposition to acquiesce in Japan's susceptibilities to the extent of rephrasing the naval formula on a basis of "security and equality" in which Japan's geographical supremacy would partly offset her tonnage shortage.

The Japanese rejection of such remedies re-emphasises the apprehensions here, thus stiffening the United States resistance. It is contended that in the future, if Japan's ratio is enlarged, she would be able to pursue whatever policy she wished on the mainland of Asia without a thought of possible physical resistance by

CANTON WINS INTERPORT

Canton won the tennis interport yesterday, defeating Hongkong by three matches to one, with the doubles left unfinished. The West River city therefore retains the trophy offered by Mr. Wong Po-keung, won in 1932.

On Saturday Canton led by two matches to love, Lai Kwong-tsun beating S. A. Rumjahn and C. Bodiker beating Tsui Wai-pui. Yesterday Tsui defeated Lai in the first singles, but Bodiker beat Rumjahn.

Union Jack Burned In Dublin

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1934. Received, November 11, 10.30 p.m.)

London, Nov. 11. While the Two Minutes' Silence was being observed by ex-Servicemen in Phoenix Park, Dublin, a group of youths publicly burned the Union Jack on College Green.

Subsequently, the police had to draw their batons following attempts by men to snatch poppies from a passer-by in the street. Over a dozen arrests were made.

Apart from the Dublin incidents, Armistice Day was reverently celebrated throughout the Empire. While His Majesty the King, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York were the central figures at the impressive service at the Cenotaph at Whitehall, the Duke of Kent represented the King at the Remembrance Day ceremonies in Edinburgh. His Royal Highness marched in the British Legion procession to the Stone of Remembrance, where he laid a wreath from the King.

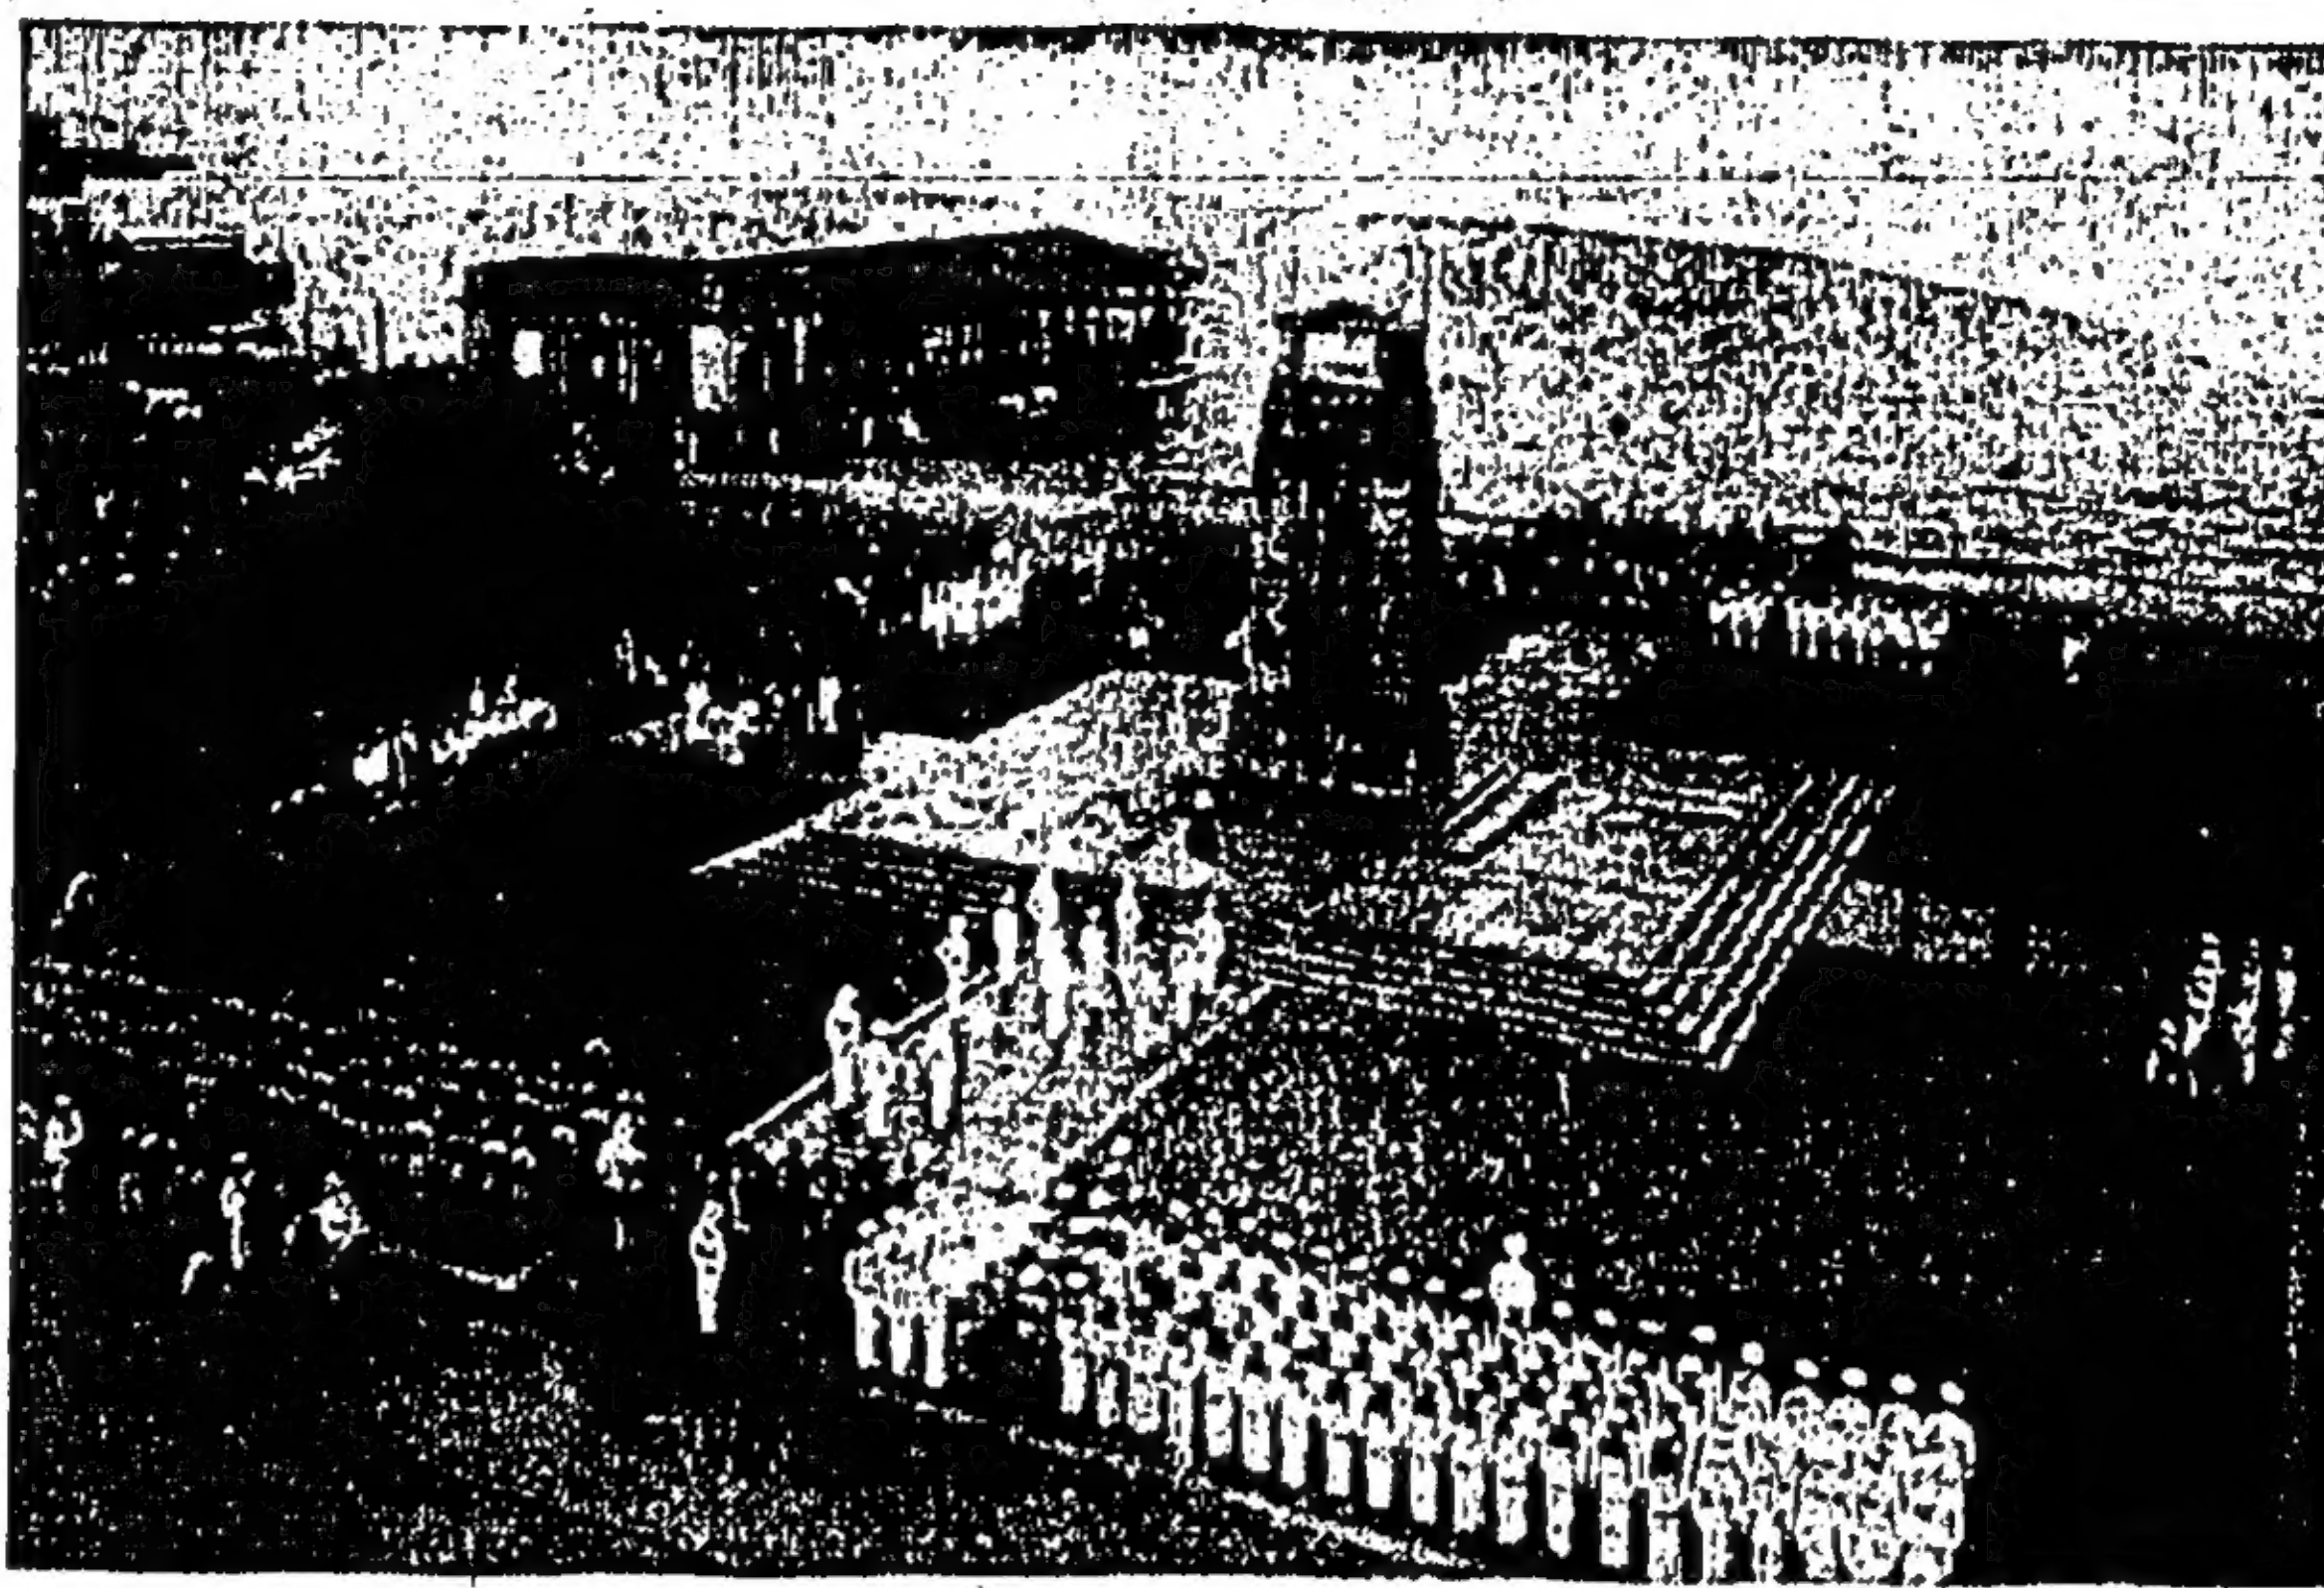

Another wreath was laid at the foot of the Stone in memory of Earl Haig, to whom, in a subsequent speech, the Duke of Kent paid a high tribute.

Anglo-American co-operation for peace was essential in the interest of the whole world declared Sir John Simon, the Foreign Secretary, in the course of an Armistice Day broadcast message to the United States. He deprecated talk of the imminence of war, and urged the development of good neighbourliness by every means, adding that in this resolve Britain and America were at one.

western powers. The United States expects to have British co-operation on behalf of the status quo and is confident that Britain is less able to cope with Japanese expansion than is the United States. America is apparently resolved to support the present status single-handed, if necessary with fleet construction.

PARISIAN CROWDS RESTLESS

DOUMERGUE CHEERED

BUT HERRIOT JEERED

Paris, Nov. 11. There were few disorders in Paris to-day, though at times the crowds were threatening.

Armistice Day was celebrated as usual, with the added spectacle of a review of garrison troops of Paris by the President, M. Lebrun.

Shouts of "Vive Doumergue!" greeted the ministerial cars as they drove away from the Government offices.

Strong forces of police were concealed around the Arc de Triomphe and at other centres of potential disorder.

There were several minor incidents and some arrests, but serious clashes of opposing political factions were avoided by keeping the different parties separated. The Communists were confined in the Bastille area and the Nationalists in the Eiffel tower.

A hostile crowd demonstrated outside the National Socialist leader's home. M. Herriot is blamed for the downfall of the Doumergue regime. Six were arrested.

A large crowd gathered in the evening, outside M. Doumergue's apartment and cheered until the deposed Premier appeared on the balcony and spoke to them briefly.

PAPAL LEGATE WARNED

CHARGES BROUGHT BY MEXICO

Mexico City, Nov. 11.

President Rodriguez has decreed that the Papal Legate, the Archbishop of Flores, and the Bishop of Juchitán must be arrested and brought before the Criminal Courts on a charge of sedition, should they cross the frontier from the United States, where they are at present, having been exiled from Mexico.

It is emphasised that the Presidential decision in no way interferes with the freedom of religious conscience, but is taken solely on the ground that the clergy cannot continue to intrigue against Mexican law.

MOLLISON INDIGNANT

DENIES REPORT OF QUARREL

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1934. Received, November 12, 8.25 a.m.)

London, Nov. 11.

Capt. James Mollison, returning from India after the accident which forced him out of the England-Australia air marathon, landed at Lympne to-day.

He was most indignant at the "ridiculous" rumour of a quarrel between him and Mrs. Amy Mollison, who returned to England ahead of him, though she was his co-pilot at the commencement of the flight. She left him at Athens, on the way back, and travelled by air transport plane. Mollison was to have raced her to London, but engine trouble again delayed him.

Mollison said there had been no quarrel between his wife and himself and "there will be no question of a quarrel," he added.

OLD U.S. PARTIES MAY BE DOOMED

NEW POLITICAL GROUPS WINNING RECRUITS

PROGRESSIVISM LATEST FASHION OF WARDS

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1934. Received, Nov. 11, 10.30 p.m.)

Washington, Nov. 11.

Political forecasts in the United States insist that the old Democratic and Republican groups are about to be supplanted by new parties, Conservative and Liberal, and that the ranks of the "Old Guard" will be divided between these camps. There will also be the Progressive element, headed by the LaFollette brothers, which expects to have the support of the masses and which subscribes to the ideals of President Roosevelt's administration and the New Deal, but not to the strictly Democratic principles.

The Progressives are manoeuvring to secure control of the Republican party and to oust Mr. Bertrand H. Snell, Potsdam, N.Y., party leader in the House of Representatives, and also Mr. Henry Fletcher, one of the chief organisers.

Mr. Gifford Pinchot, who has served for years as Governor of Pennsylvania, declared to-day:

"The Republican Party must be Progressive or stay bust!"

PARTIES MUST GO.

One of the Michigan Senators, Mr. James Couzens, says: "Partisanship should be abandoned to enable all to support President Roosevelt."

Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, believes there will be an entirely new political alignment on America, the country being divided, in all probability, into Liberal and Conservative groups.

Senator LaFollette expected his new Progressive party will attract the masses. He explains, however, that he and President Roosevelt are in accord.

REPUBLICANS FINISHED

The Republicans, as a party, are finished, according to Mr. James Farley, Postmaster General.

"We'll make it unanimous in 1936," he said.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Chicago, warns the Democrats against discord. There must be no wavering in the ranks of the next Congress, he says.

AUSTRIA MOBILISES RESERVES

REBELS AIM AT SCHUSCHNIGG

MACHINE-GUNS ON GUARD

Vienna, Nov. 11.

While the rest of Europe was marking the anniversary of the end of the Great War, Austria was mobilising her Heimwehr reserves and police to meet another threat of revolution.

Threats against the life of Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg, the Chancellor, who succeeded the murdered Chancellor Dollfuss, were found in placard form posted up on the walls of the workers' quarter last night.

Circulars were found elsewhere threatening a revolution and the establishment of a dictatorship by the Proletariat.

The authorities are taking the most elaborate precautions. The guards at the Chancellery have been strongly reinforced and additional units are on duty at police headquarters in readiness to rush to any threatened spot.

Troops of the regular army, manning machine-guns have taken up positions which enable them to cover key positions in the city. Their guns mark all entrances and all sides of the radio broadcasting station, one of the points at which the Nazis directed their ineffectual push last summer.

REDS' OLD CAPITAL CAPTURED

GOVERNMENT'S STEADY MARCH

RESISTANCE OVERCOME

It has been definitely established now that the Central Government forces are in complete control of Juichin, ex-capital of the Chinese Soviet Government.

According to a Government communique, the detachments of the Central Government Division, under the command of General Li Mei-an, entered the city of Juichin yesterday morning and were subsequently followed by another division of troops under General Soong Hsi-lin.

In the course of their advance on Juichin, they were frequently met and challenged by irregular units of Reds, whom, however, they easily overcame.

The Red armies are retreating toward Huichang and Yutu.

Lillian Bond, to Appear in British Picture

"DIRTY WORK"

Lillian Bond, the well-known Hollywood actress, will be the next member of the film colony there to appear in a British picture. She has been signed to play the feminine lead in a Gaumont-British production.

Lillian Bond is an English girl who made her stage debut at 14 in "Dick Whittington," and later appeared in the choruses of three revues. While rehearsing for "Sunny" she became married, changed her plans, and went to America. She has played in more than twenty Hollywood productions, including "The Old Dark House," "It's Tough to be Famous," "Air Mail," "Hot Saturday," "Her Splendid Folly," and "Double Happiness." She returned to England recently, and has been appearing in a London stage show.

The picture in which Lillian Bond will make her British film debut is "Dirty Work." The picture will also be notable for the fact that Gordon Harker and Ralph Lynn will be "teamed" for the first time, under the direction of Tom Walls. Ralph Lynn will appear as floor-walker in a jewellery establishment, and Gordon Harker as commissioner in the same establishment. Robertson Hare is also in the cast.

OTHER FILMS.

Other forthcoming Gaumont-British productions scheduled are:—

"I Serve"—A drama with a Serbian background, dealing with the period of the Sarajevo assassination. Conrad Veldt will star, directed by Lothar Mendes.

"Oh Listen to the Band" (provisional title)—A subject for Jack Hylton and his band.

"The Passing of the Third Floor Back"—This drama of the supernatural will be in the hands of Berthold Viertel, director of "Little Friend."

"The Thirty-Nine Steps"—John Buchan's spy drama, to be directed by Alfred Hitchcock.

"The Code"—A musical extravaganza with a South American setting, for direction by Maurice Elvey.

"The Tunnel"—An imaginative vision of the future, in which a Transatlantic tunnel is the central theme, also to be directed by Maurice Elvey.

"Marry the Girl"—Another Tom Walls comedy.

"Me and Marlborough"—A Cicely Courtneidge subject, which Victor Saville will direct.

JACK MULHALL.

Jack Mulhall, one of the most popular stars of silent pictures, is "coming back." He has been assigned a role in "Evelyn Prentice," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new detective romance reuniting William Powell and Myrna Loy.

CONTRACT FOR CLAUDE RAINS.

Carl Laemmle, jun., has signed Claude Rains for a two picture starring contract. The first picture is "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," and the other is "The Return of Frankenstein," which James Whale will produce from a script now being written by R. C. Sheriff.

Claude Rains made his screen debut in "The Invisible Man."

"GREAT EXPECTATIONS" FINISHED.

HOME-MADE SCONES

FRESHLY made scones are always appreciated, and as the days grow colder, hot scones for tea are great favourites with young and old.

If any milk has become sour, do not throw it away, but keep it for making scones and cakes. It renders them lighter and more spongy. You can make the scones quite plain or with sultanas or currants in them, as you prefer.

Here is a recipe for plain scones:—Mix the flour, a little salt, two ozs. sugar and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder together. Rub in three ozs. butter and mix all with one egg well beaten and a little milk. Roll out, cut into shapes, brush over with beaten egg, place on baking-sheet, and bake in a quick oven.

Universal City, and the large company which was required for this Charles Dickens story has dispersed.

Jane Wyatt is already back in New York for a winter stage production. Francis L. Sullivan, the British actor, who played Jagers, is going into the principal character lead of "Cheating Cheaters," scheduled for immediate production at Universal City. Henry Hull, who played the lead in "Great Expectations," is making preparations for his next picture, "Robinson Crusoe."

BRITISH ACTRESSES

Mona Barrie and Pat Paterson, the British film actresses, have both had their Fox contracts renewed.

Mona Barrie earned the contract for her acting in "Charlie Chan in London" and Pat Paterson for her performance in "Love Time."

ANOTHER DICKENS FILM.

Fox will make a film of Charles Dickens's "The Tale of Two Cities." It will be directed by Frank Lloyd, who made "Cavalcade."

WRONG BABY

AMAZING TANGLE
AT HOSPITAL

PARENTS DENY IDENTITY

Parents who refused to accept a baby girl as their own, hospital authorities declaring they have given them the right child, a baby girl only 21 months old, are the cause of an unusual tangle involving the Liverpool Hospitals Committee. An inquiry is under way.

The father concerned is Mr. Edwin Price, a hairdresser, of Low Hill, Liverpool. The child which he at first kept at his home for three weeks as his own after her discharge from hospital has been taken from him and given to another claimant.

The position is complicated by the fact that Price's child is named Dorothy and that there was another child of about the same age admitted into the hospital named Dorothy May Price.

Details of the tangle were brought to the notice of the Public Assistance Committee by Mrs. J. Braddock, a Labour member.

She said that the baby daughter of Mr. Edwin Price was sent to the Belmont Hospital for treatment for a skin complaint 15 weeks ago.

The parents visited the hospital on six successive Sundays to see the child and were then informed that she had contracted diphtheria and had been transferred to the Fazackerley Hospital.

After the little girl had been at the Fazackerley Hospital for six weeks, during which time the parents were not allowed to see her, they received a note asking them to take her away as she had recovered.

TAKEN BY ATTENDANTS.

"On Monday," continued Mrs. Braddock, "after the child had been at home for three weeks a motor-car called at the house with a man and two women attendants from the Belmont Hospital."

"The parents were told that the child was not their own and she was taken away in the car. Mr. Price went to the hospital and was informed that the child had been given to another man who had claimed her."

"Another child was shown to the parents, but they refused to accept her as their own."

"They want to know now what has happened to their own child."

"WHERE IS MY OWN DAUGHTER?"

Mr. Price said to a reporter, "Although the child which I brought back from the hospital was my home for three weeks I had a suspicion from the first day that it was not my own child."

"Although it had the same mannerisms, it seemed too bonny to be my child. The baby that was shown to me in the hospital after they had taken the other child away is definitely not my daughter. All I want to know is where is my own daughter?"

The matron of the Fazackerley Hospital stated:

"By an unfortunate clerical error at the Belmont Hospital the addresses of the two girls named Price were transposed. We, of course, could only be guided by the particulars which we received and which were on the bed-card which the little patient brought with her."

"A Mrs. Price arrived at the hospital to take the child away."

"At first the little girl did not seem to wish to go with her, but the staff took little notice, as after a child of that age has been in hospital for a long time it is not unusual for it to want to stay."

"To me it is amazing that the mother should not have recognised that the child was not her's."

WHAT COMES NEXT IN AVIATION?

By J. L. HODSON.

WHAT are the next strides forward we shall take in aviation? How far are we from the silent aeroplane? How long yet before landing speed is so reduced that you and I can begin to fly our own machines with greatly diminished risk of a crash?

With such questions as these I went to Mr. H. E. Wimperis, Director of Research at the Air Ministry, one of the world's distinguished authorities.

I left him with the impression that the most picturesque development within the next few years will be the widespread use of the autogiro as the well-to-do private man's "car"—a machine that can rise anywhere and land, as Mr. Wimperis put it, "on a pocket handkerchief."

The autogiro will do its steady 100 to 130 miles an hour—over twice the speed any motor-car averages.

I suggested they might land on our roofs. It was possible, he agreed, but air currents and eddies would, perhaps, create difficulties.

His department is having an autogiro built that will hold four or five people, a machine in which he can carry out scientific investigations and which will be at the disposal also of the Director of Civil Aviation.

NOISELESS PLANES.

We talked of the coming of the noiseless aeroplane. Mr. Wimperis said there was probably an irreducible minimum of aircraft sound—but a good deal less than that we are now familiar with.

There are two chief noises—that of air screw and that of engine. The first is already largely reduced by geared engines now beginning to be widely used. Engine noise, it is plain, can now be quelled also to a very considerable extent, but the price to be paid is additional weight. Dangers of fire on crash enter into it too, although one need not regard these as unavoidable. Civil machines that are comparatively silent we may expect soon—it depends on public demand.

Military fighting machines are a different affair; operational speed is not, obviously, going to be sacrificed to save noise there. (In parenthesis one may ask: What of the Night Bomber quietly sailing over and dropping horror and desolation from a quiet sky?) How much added weight would quietness entail on an air liner? I asked. Mr. Wimperis thought it might be that of half a person, thus reducing the passengers by one. But reduced baggage would serve, of course.

MODERATE LIMIT.

In the Schneider Trophy contests speeds were reached of 407.5 miles an hour. Mr. Wimperis doubts if we shall see civil machines flying faster than about 300 miles an hour. It is very largely a question of added expense. To put up speed from 100 to 200 miles an hour requires eight times the horsepower.

After you reach the speed of 550 miles an hour the "drag" or air resistance rises indeed like a wall. "An enormous increase in horsepower would not get you any further," he said. The retractable undercarriage (drawn up into the fuselage after ascent) is likely to be used all over the world, he believes. The Americans have led in this and have talked of speed of 600 miles an hour for models akin to our Schneider Trophy machines.)

I asked Mr. Wimperis what added speed he thought drawing up the wheels would give the average 100 m.p.h. machine. He thought about 15 miles.

We discussed (quite speculatively) the Schneider model. To draw up its floats would necessitate a device of such weight as to lose more than the gain. Again, if the floats were dropped off, how would the pilot leave the machine?

He saw no way except by parachute and that would be extremely difficult and risky.

Probably the chosen moment would have to be after an upward zoom and at the instant the machine hung, as it were, upwards, before descent began.

Besides the retractable undercarriage and the use of self-starters and brakes there is the propeller of variable pitch. This again has been used more frequently in the United States—a matter of one angle for propulsion. Mr. Wimperis said it results in more weight and its advantages are limited; there are doubts here as to how worth while it is for normal aeroplanes.

I referred to the report that the French have carried by airplane and fired from the air one of the famous 75's (a piece of artillery), and he pointed out that aircraft have transported recently in New Guinea a good deal of mining equipment by air—the heaviest pieces something like 2½ tons. As long as two years ago we launched a flying boat weighing 33 tons of nearly 5,000 horsepower, and Mr. Wimperis does not regard that as the limit.

Finally Mr. Wimperis spoke of a new use for aircraft in which experiments have recently taken place in Northern Rhodesia—the work of fighting locust plagues. In this case a Moth acted as scout and a Hercules de Havilland machine scattered poisonous dust (sodium arsenite) ahead and across the line of approach of the swarm. The swarm was of brown locusts, flying at 100 to 300 feet and at eight miles an hour. They did not try to avoid the dust, which they absorbed and considerable mortality occurred.

The South African Government has tried another method—that of spraying locusts on the ground as they rested between dawn and the time when the day grows warm enough for them to fly. Destruction of the thousands of millions of locusts when the plagues are at their height Mr. Wimperis does not think is feasible by aircraft, but if they could be attacked at their breeding places when their infestation first begins great effects might be achieved.

Investigations into their breeding places is now being pursued. Damage in the present infestation is estimated at seven million pounds so the experiment's importance can be gauged.

GREATER SPEEDS.

To this interview with Mr. Wimperis may be added some views given to me by Captain Geoffrey de Havilland, whose new Comet machines for the Australian flight attracted so much attention. He thinks the next big move will be a greater concentration on commercial aircraft, which may possibly within 10 years reach 250 miles an hour cruising speed.

As to lower-landing speeds, it is very doubtful whether present landing speeds will be or need be reduced. But flaps and similar devices will keep them down. "It is more a matter of steepening the gliding angle of 'clean' machines by the use of air brakes (flaps, etc.) combined with good control and good view." Aircraft of the 2-4 seater type will, he believes, become cheaper, but a big reduction in a short time is unlikely.

All machines will tend to become cheaper and not less safe if Government control of civil machines is removed. (The Gores! Committee has recommended it should be.)

"Approved" firms are allowed to employ their own inspectors, but there are other Government regulations tending towards delay and expense, he says.

PRINCE VISITS INVENTORS

Pickle Tongs And Lemon Squeezers

The Prince of Wales paid a surprise visit to the International Exhibition of Inventions at the Central Hall, Westminster, last month, and spent nearly two hours working ingenious "gadgets" with their inventors. He bought three lemon squeezers for making lemonade, and spent several minutes picking out pickled onions with patent pickle tongs.

When the Prince reached Mrs. Elizabeth Richards, who is the first woman in the history of the exhibition to win the premier gold medal award, he shook hands with her and congratulated her heartily.

When a new game of table cricket with a wooden batsman was shown to him, he was greatly amused to see a ball strike the batsman. "That is an excellent indoor demonstration of body-line bowling," he remarked.

The invention of the Hon. Mrs. Tennant for holding the telephone to the ear on a wooden arm interested him. "Its simplicity is the great thing," he said. "I should think it would be a great help to a person who was in bed ill, or to a very busy business man."

When a device for preventing nicotine from a pipe getting into the mouthpiece was shown to him, he nodded understandingly. "I am a pipe smoker myself," he said, "and I think this is a jolly fine idea."

He inspected an ingenious key burglar alarm which was invented by Mr. John Delmore Taylor, of Glasgow, and has been tested by Scotland Yard.

Another Scottish invention which the Prince saw was an appliance for humanely trapping ground vermin, devised by Mr. Donald Cat-tanach, of Kingussie.

Dying by an assassin's bullets, King Alexander I of Yugo-Slavia lay slumped in the seat of the automobile in which he was making a triumphal entry to Marseille, as this picture was taken at the tragedy scene. The photo was telephoned from Marseille to London. A short time later the monarch breathed his last, after being removed from the auto to the prefecture of police. One of the guards stationed by the death car until the king could be removed is seen in the foreground.

FIGHT AGAINST DRINKING CLUBS

CARRIED TO HOUSE OF COMMONS

The recent announcement that there is to be a Parliamentary campaign to wipe out bogus drinking clubs has created great interest.

A deputation from the Retail Licensed Traders will meet the Home Secretary very shortly, after which the fight will be carried to the House of Commons.

It was stated that a special Bill is being promoted by the Temperance Council of the Christian Churches and that it would have the support of the bona-fide club organisations.

It is now learned, however, that the clubs have printed a Bill of their own which is waiting to be introduced as soon as Parliamentary time permits.

Apparently the Temperance Council's proposals cannot be accepted by the bona-fide clubs, as their provisions go much too far from the clubman's point of view.

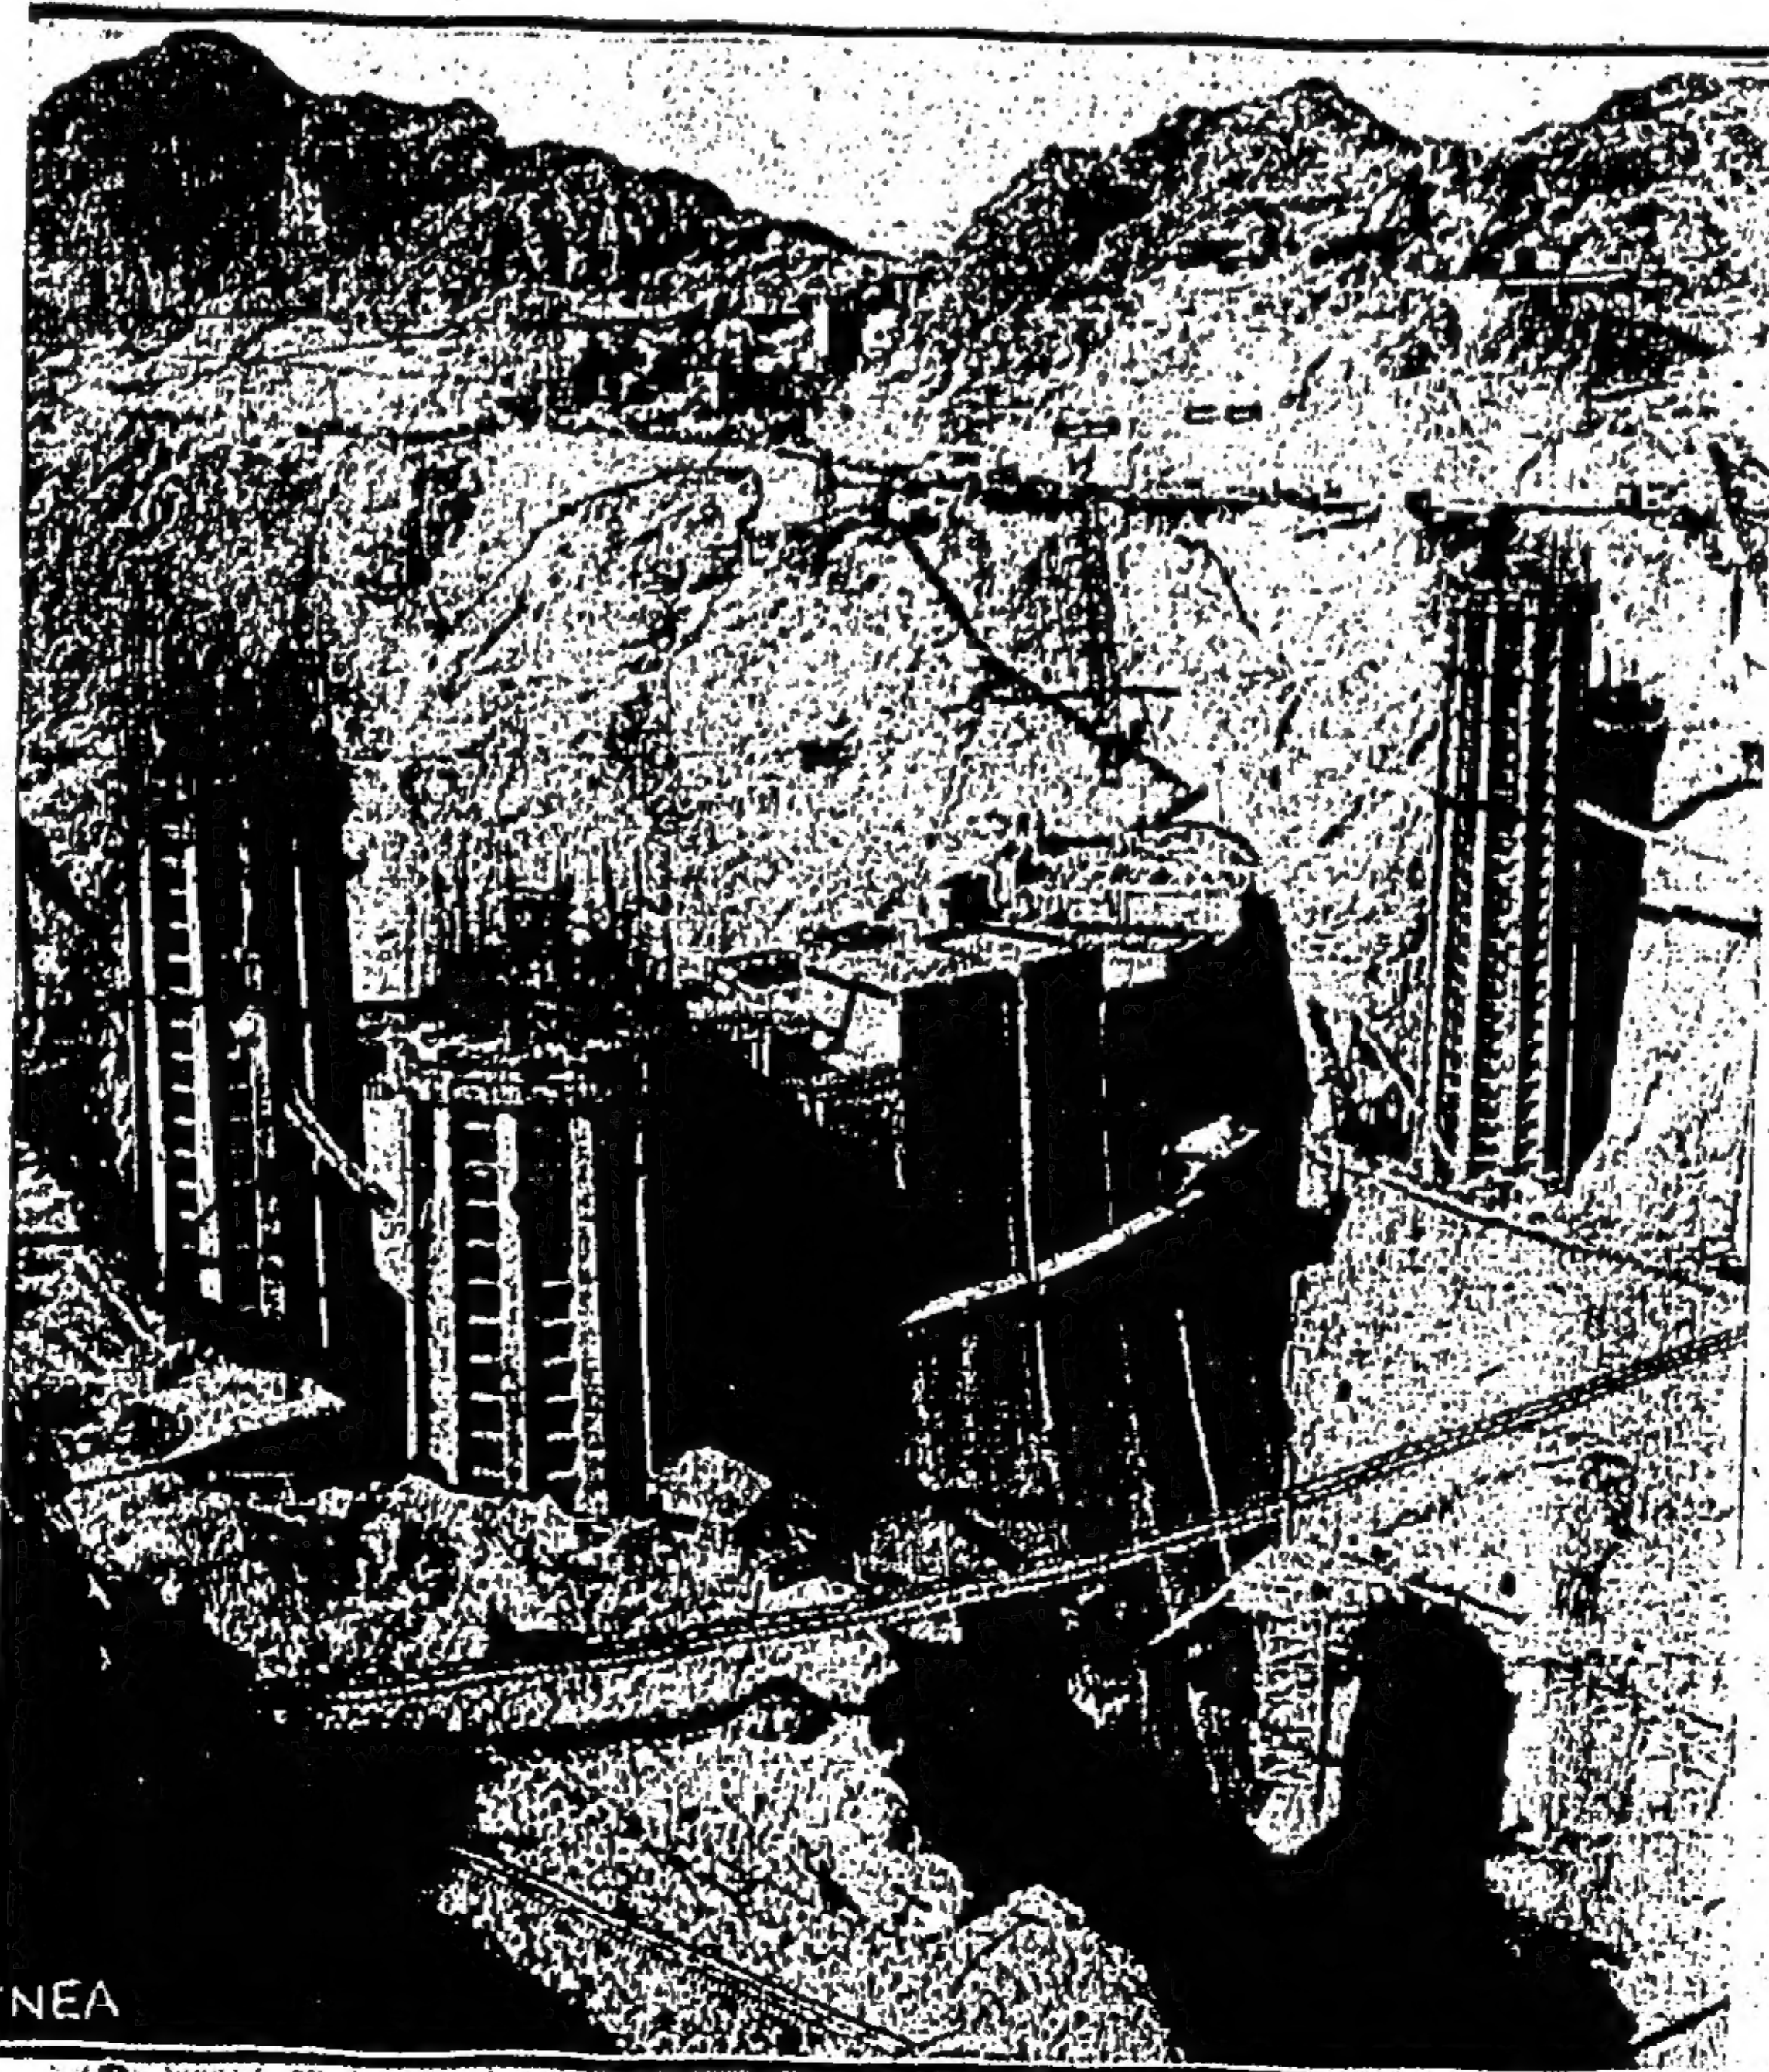

This also applies to the Licensed traders, who are anxious to stamp out bogus clubs, though they are not prepared to support the more sweeping reforms to be proposed by the Churches.

The bona-fide clubs will claim, however, that if the drinking dens are wiped which were taken away from the out by stricter regulations and registration conditions it will then be possible for the Government to be united in opposition to the one-man club, the only purpose of which is to sell drink during prohibited hours.

A new view of the upstream side of gigantic Boulder dam on the Colorado river, rapidly nearing completion. Giant towers on each side of the stream bed are intake towers, feeding penstock tunnels to the power house. Officials of Six Companies, Inc., builders of the project, estimate that the dam will be finished in February.

weaver uttering sounds which evidently meant, "Sit down, the

"Thank you," he replied, sure the strangeness wore off. The

ARMISTICE DAY IN HONGKONG

Impressive Ceremony At Cenotaph

Armistice Day in Hongkong was celebrated yesterday with all the ceremony, reverence and homage that have been accorded the previous fifteen anniversaries of the end of the Great War. The murky weather in Hongkong added to, rather than detracted from the solemnity of the occasion.

His Excellency the Governor
with senior officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force, attended the British Legion service at St.
John's Cathedral, the main ceremony at the Cenotaph and a special observance by the Chinese community at the Chinese Cathedral service.

From an early hour the scene in the neighbourhood of the Cenotaph was one of quiet waiting, hundreds of people braving the discomfort of the heavy mist and drizzling rain to gain a position near enough to the square to enable them to take part in the service.

The balconies of the Hongkong Club, whose committee had hospitably thrown open its doors for the occasion, were thronged with people, and from the verandah of the Cricket Club, the Supreme Court and the roof of the latter building, several hundreds more watched the proceedings.

In the centre of the Supreme Court verandah, wives of officials and Legislative Councillors took part in the service.

The square presented an imposing spectacle at 10.45 a.m. when detachments representing each regiment in the Colony were lined up with the Consular body and others round the Cenotaph.

A large body of Army officers from all sections of the garrison stood at the north-west corner with representatives of Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service whose white immaculate uniforms presented a striking contrast to the be-medalled and brilliant appearance of the soldiers.
Officers of the Royal Air Force stood next to them with a group of Indian officers, tall and turbaned, whose large representation was in keeping with their shares of the honours of war.

A sparkling sight was the South Wales Borderers' band who were once again to provide the music for the service.

Brilliant Display.
Royal Naval officers formed two deep to complete the north side of the square and adjacent to them were the Royal Engineers and Old Comrades Association, the Legion of Frontiersmen, the British Legion and the Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps with all companies represented.

Close to the Cenotaph were drawn up the massed buglers of the 1st Battalion Lincolnshire Regiment and the 1st Battalion South Wales Borderers, whilst the rest of the side was taken up by foreign army and naval representatives, the Consular body, the Royal Merchant Navy, brilliant and unfamiliar uniforms lending colour to the scene.

Army and navy detachments representing each regiment and ship stood in close files opposite the Supreme Court; and to complete the square were a Royal Air Force detachment, a group of Boy Scouts
under District Scout Master Dormer, ex-naval and military nurses, Girl Guides, and members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade.
Members of the Legislative Council turned out en masse in full morning dress to receive the Governor. The Colonial Secretary,
Mr. D. W. Trautman, his Honour
the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A.
MacGregor, and the Attorney General, the Hon. Mr. R. E. Lindsell were among those present.

Awaiting the Governor were His Excellency the General Officer Commanding Troops, Maj. Gen. O. C.
Borrett, with the Senior Naval Officer, Capt. J. M. Mannors of
H. M. S. Suffolk, Squadron Leader
Keary of the Royal Air Force; Rear Admiral Richard, C.-in-C. French Squadron in the Far East; Capt.
Martin, Senior Officer of the United States Navy in harbour; and Commander Hilda of the gun boat
Saga, representing the Japanese Navy.

Governor Arrives.
Shortly before 11 a.m. the choir of St. John's Cathedral left the Supreme Court and filed into the square wearing their black casuals and white surplices.

Behind them came Bishop R. O.
Hall who was to give the benediction; Bishop Valtorta, Vicar Apostolic of Hongkong, and
Rev. E. G. Powell. The Rev. H. W.
Baines, Bishop's Chaplain, Dean
Alfred Swann, and the Rev. E. C.
H. Tribbeck were also present.

Three minutes before the hour of eleven, His Excellency the Governor arrived by car under an escort of the Motor Machine Gun Section of the Volunteer Corps. He saluted the group of officers awaiting him and walked up the steps of the Cenotaph where he stood motionless a few feet from the solitary wreath which had been consecrated at the Cathedral and placed at the foot of the Cenotaph.

Picked detachments of Police and Police Reserves were on duty.
At a signal from the leader's baton the buglers' instruments flashed to their lips and the thrilling Last Post rang through the square. A moment later and the boom of a naval gun announced the commencement of the two minutes silence. An absolute stillness was imposed in the neighbourhood of the square; trams on Queen's Road stopped and pedestrians stood still in the roadway breathing a silent prayer for the departed dead. Ships and ferries in the harbour continued noiselessly on their way, but round the Cenotaph there was little to be heard above the quiet fall of the rain.

A second report and the chiming of eleven concluded the brief silence.

"O Valiant Hearts."

The massed buglers then sounded the "Reveille" their absolute precision and accuracy being admirable.

The familiar strains of "Abide with me" were played by the South Wales Borderers' band, the tune being used for the singing of "O Valiant Hearts," in which the choir led.

A short prayer and a benediction by Bishop Hall preceded the National Anthem, in which all joined.

His Excellency the Governor then mounted the steps and laid his own wreath, a beautiful ring of white and red flowers, at the foot of the Cenotaph. He was followed in order by the senior members of the services and others, after which he again saluted the Cenotaph and departed for the Memorial Gate Chinese ceremony.

Civilian members added their tributes to the growing profusion of wreaths as the troops marched off, and in a few minutes the steps of the Cenotaph were piled high with beautiful flowers.

Many of the wreaths had been worked in elaborate designs, that contributed by the Royal Air Force bearing cleverly made wings to indicate flight. The naval tributes were noticeable for their simplicity, whilst others like those from the Royal Artillery and the R.A.O.B., bore letters worked in with flowers. The Italian Con-sulate and Rear Admiral Richard sent wreaths in which a lavish floral adornment added to the effect of the simply worded messages of sympathy.

Many Wreaths.

Many of the wreaths bore no names but among those that could be identified were wreaths from:

AT MEMORIAL GATE

Governor Received by Chinese Community Representatives.

The service attended by His Excellency the Governor at the Chinese Memorial Arch at the Banic Garden was the special tribute paid by the Chinese community to Armistice Day.

At 11.45 a.m. the Governor arrived at the foot of the steps accompanied by Maj. Gen. O. C.
Borrett, Capt. J. M. Mannors, and Squadron Leader Keary. They were met by the Hon. Dr. R. H.
Kotewall, the Hon. Dr. S. W. Ta'o, and the Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau who escorted them up the steps to the Memorial.

Buglers of the South Wales
Borderers and the Chinese Section of the 40th Company Royal Engineers sounded "The Last Post" and there a short pause was followed by the "Reveille."

The Governor then laid his wreath at the foot of the Memorial and was followed by Chinese representatives of the Sanitary Board, the Watch Committee, the Tung Wah Hospital, the Po Leung
Kok and the Chinese General
Chamber of Commerce.

Special detachments of Police Reservists lined the steps and a large number of District Watchmen paraded under Inspector Andrews.

arouse much admiration.

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

Concentrating on heart interest and emotional values, "Straight is the Way" coming on Thursday to the Queen's Theatre and adapted from the stage play, "Four Walls", is tempered with excitement blended with laughs and tears and peopled with human beings. Frenchot Tene's inner battle to find himself, to find love, to choose between the calls of Gladys George and Karen Morley, and his desire to go straight give a personal flavour to the dramatic values, spread before the teen-aging canvas of East Side life. May Robinson gives pathos and loveliness to the mother role. Miss George, a new comer has flame. Paul Sloman does a competent job of direction. The production is down to earth and is above programme picture calibre. Others in the cast include C. Henry Gordon, Jack LaRue, Raymond Hatten and William Bakewell.

"Chained"

If you want an evening of royal entertainment hurry to the Queen's Theatre where Joan Crawford and Clark Gable's new co-starring vehicle is showing. It is titled "Chained" and was directed by Clarence Brown, who gave us "Sadie McKee", Joan's last. Mounted in lavish Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer style, beautifully photographed and replete with a series of well-knit, fast-moving scenes, it is one of the best pictures to be offered in many a month. Clark Gable plays the kind of role the public has been clamouring for, that of a young rancher in South America. And as a modern New Yorker girl who falls in love with him, Joan Crawford gives one of the finest performances of her vivid career. Written by Edgar Selwyn especially for the screen, and adapted by John Lee Mahin, "Chained" is a vibrant, powerful drama of modern manners and morals. The supporting cast is equally good, with Otto Kruger as the gentlemanly Mr. Field, Marjorie Gatenon as his wife, Stuart Erwin as Johnnie, Gable's irreverent friend, and Una O'Connor as Amy, Joan Crawford's sympathetic companion. Diane (Joan Crawford) is the girl to whom Field has been devoted. When his wife refuses to divorce him, Field urges Diane, who can never forget her disappointment. On the boat she meets Mike (Clark Gable) and falls in love in spite of herself. A day on his South American ranch convinces her there is no one else in life for her. She returns to explain to Field, but finds he has obtained the divorce. To save him suffering, they are married. She meets Mike a year later in New York and in an effort to settle her love for him, rushes with her husband to their Lake Placid cabin, what happens when Mike follows must be seen to be appreciated.

"Grand Canary"

Tense drama, enacted amid settings of vivid beauty! This, advance reports declare, describes "Grand Canary", Jesse L. Lasky's latest production for Fox Films, which comes to the King's Theatre, on Wednesday. In the stellar Warner Baxter, while opposite him will be seen Madge Evans, who also was his screen sweetheart in "Stand Up and Cheer". "Grand Canary" was produced from the recent best-selling novel of the same name, by A. J. Cronin. It was filmed against authentically reproduced backgrounds of Grand Canary, one of the picturesque Spanish-controlled Canary Islands, and the settings are said to strike a new note in exotic beauty. The Cronin novel was especially purchased by Lasky as a Baxter starring vehicle late last year and has since been adapted by Ernest Pascal in conference with Irving Cummings, who directed. The picture takes its title from the setting on one of the Canary Islands, the action of the story bringing together the characters on the Spanish Isle during the yellow fever epidemic. Baxter's role is that of a doctor who is cast by coincidence in the midst of two epidemics, one love, the other yellow fever. Miss Rambeau in playing the comedy role of Mother Hemingway, matron of a Santa Cruz hotel of questionable repute, is returning to Fox Film studios for her second role in Lasky productions. Her other role was as the queen in "The House of Rothschild", a performance that earned her present assignment. Others in the cast include Zita Johann, Roger Imhof, H. B. Warner, and Barry Norton.

"Straight is the Way"

Frenchot Tene has come to the decisive turning point of his career as a motion picture actor. Heretofore, he has been seen chiefly in roles of millionaire playboys, always in up-to-the-minute clothes and speaking flawless English. Tene, it is known, did not enjoy too many of these roles. He wanted variety. He wanted to escape being "typed". Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer recently decided to toughen him—and now he plays the hard-boiled, cynical ex-convict, Benn Horowitz, in "Straight is the Way", dramatic picture of a New York cast-side family which comes on Thursday to the Queen's Theatre. Tene believes the new characterization, heavily dramatic, will not mark a turning point in his career. Not that he desires to avoid the more polished roles of the screen, but he is anxious to prove his versatility in handling any good parts that come his way. "Straight is the Way" is based on the play, "Four Walls" by Dana Burnett in which Paul Muni scored one of his outstanding Broadway hits. Tene plays the Muni role, that of Benny, the outside New York boy who returns from a penitentiary, determined to break loose from his former evil associates, and start on a fresh life. Women play an important part in the subsequent happenings, in the

AT THE CENOTAPH

ARMISTICE DAY IN LONDON

London, Nov. 10. The sixteenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, which ended the Great War will be commemorated to-morrow.

The central feature of all ceremonies will be the observance of a two minutes' silence.

This year, as the anniversary falls on a Sunday, more people than usual will observe the silence in churches, but, at local shrines throughout the Empire the occasion will also be solemnly kept.

As usual, the principal ceremony will be at the Cenotaph in Whitehall and weather permitting, it will be attended by H.M. the King, who will lay a wreath at the base of the memorial. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and Prince Arthur of Connaught will attend and other members of Royal Family will be represented. H.M. the Queen and the Duchess of York will witness the ceremony from the windows of the Home Office.

Armistice day is usually set aside as the occasion for the public sale of artificial poppies, made by wounded ex-Servicemen in aid of the funds of their organisation.

Poppy Day took place to-day and many thousands of voluntary workers were in the streets to sell emblems, which were universally worn.—British Wireless.

Great Response.

London, Nov. 10. To-day was the wettest Poppy Day on record in London. Nevertheless, women sellers of the famous emblem went about their philanthropic task in a heroic spirit, regardless of the pitiless downpour.

King At Cenotaph.

London, Nov. 11. Mild weather enabled His Majesty the King, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, to participate in the Armistice Day Service at the Cenotaph.

The ceremony was attended by an enormous crowd. His Majesty wore the service uniform of a Field Marshal, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York wore naval uniforms.

After the King and his eldest sons had laid wreaths at the base of the Cenotaph, they were followed by the Prime Minister (Mr. Ramsay MacDonald), other members of the Cabinet and representatives of the Dominions, including General Smuts.

The Queen and the Duchess of York watched the ceremony from a window in the Home Office.—Reuter.

TIENTSIN GUNMEN

PROMINENT GENERALS SHOT TO DEATH

Tientsin, Nov. 10. There was a sensational shooting affair in the National Grand Hotel last night.

Two gunmen entered the room in which Generals Chi Hung-chang, Jen Ying-chi and Liu Shou-hsiang were playing mah-jongg and fired seven shots.

General Liu went down under the hail of lead and subsequently died. The two other Chinese generals were badly wounded.

General Chi Hung-chang is the former follower of the "Christian General," Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, and commanded the troops at Kalgan during the Japanese invasion of Jehol.

The outrage is believed to be purely political. The gunmen fled, and no arrests have been made.—Reuter.

Second Victim.

Tientsin, Nov. 11. General Chi Hung-chang, who was one of the three victims of the sensational shooting at the Kuomin Hotel on Friday night, succumbed to his wounds shortly after being admitted to hospital.

General Jin Ying-tsi is only slightly wounded and is expected to recover shortly.—Central News.

Only One Casualty.

Tientsin, Nov. 11. The police authorities of the French Concession, in which the shooting affair took place last Friday, resulting in one person being killed and two wounded including General Chi Hung-chang, deny that General Chi Hung-chang succumbed to his wounds.

The two wounded generals are being detained at the Police Headquarters of the French Concession. Twelve suspects believed to have connection with the affair have been arrested.—Central News Agency.

JAPANESE PRAISE

MINISTER SEES IMPROVEMENT IN NORTH CHINA

Peking, Nov. 11. When asked as to the attitude of the Japanese Government toward the problem of Inner Mongolia, Mr. Ariyoshi, Japanese Minister to China, expressed the opinion that the problem of Mongolian autonomy was China's internal problem only, which, he believed, was well on the road toward a satisfactory settlement.

The Japanese Minister also said that the internal and external situation of North China had been much improved since his departure from Peking.—Central News Agency.

ANGLO-JAPANESE ALLIANCE

REVIVAL IN NEW FORM?

London, Nov. 11. The Sunday Referee understands that, as a result of the visit to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's country residence, last week, of the Japanese naval delegates, the way is cleared for an agreement in principle, which will enable the Naval Conference to meet next year.

The Japanese delegates have now intimated that they are willing to accept something less than naval parity, owing to the revival in a new form of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the paper says.

The Referee declares that this development has been brought about as a result of the damage to British interests in the Far East, which the severance of the old Anglo-Japanese Alliance occasioned, and it should lead to an Anglo-Japanese arrangement to end the cotton war.

The paper adds that Germany has already reached an understanding with Japan, and the present Anglo-Japanese development may result in a new alliance, which will seriously weaken what remains of the Franco-British Entente.—Reuter.

American Opinion

Washington, Nov. 10. Admiral Clark Woodward, U.S.N., to-day cleared that danger of hostilities exists in several places on three continents. The naval officer specified Europe, and, stressing the historic United States condition of unpreparedness, said: "Because, in the past, treaties have been found to be nothing but scraps of paper, it behoves the United States to trust only to land and sea strength, and to be continually and properly prepared for defence."

Raymond L. Buell, in the Foreign Policy Bulletin, says that the question confronting the naval purporters is "whether a formula can be found under which a new naval agreement can be concluded, satisfying Japan's prestige but not constituting recognition on the part of the United States and Britain of Japan's recent treaty violations." This agreement should be possible if Washington would admit that "however much Americans dislike Japan's aggressions, they will not support the policy of using the United States Navy to dislodge Japan from China."

"There is scant possibility of war with Japan, unless the Japanese seize the Philippines, Ponce in the Pacific can be best preserved if the United States

DIRIGIBLES AS WAR WEAPONS

The recent assertion by General William E. Mitchell, before the U.S. Federal Aviation Commission, that the United States should proceed to build at least fifty dirigibles along the lines of the Macon, raises the old question of the value of such craft for war purposes. Aside from the General's fondness for saying startling things, it is conceded that he has a good knowledge of military affairs, and his advice is apparently causing a re-examination of the possibilities of the dirigible as a military weapon, in spite of the disillusionment caused by the loss of the ill-fated Akron. It is General Mitchell's view that the loss of the Akron reflected on the competence of the Navy's lighter-than-air experts rather than on the capabilities of the dirigible itself. Given proper handling, he argues, the Akron should never have been lost; its loss, in other words, is not prima facie evidence that giant dirigibles are too fragile for military use. The idea of those who take General Mitchell's view is that aircraft has completely revolutionised strategy—navies and armies have taken a back seat, and the side that can strike the hardest blow in the air will win, because it will demoralise its foe before naval forces and the troops can swing into action. If this viewpoint is conceded, it is not difficult to appreciate the plea for the building of a fleet of dirigibles. With such a fleet, it is contended, it would be possible to strike at a distance of six or eight thousand miles—it could be sent across oceans, and even if half of it were lost, it might strike such a devastating blow that the enemy would never be able to recover. These submissions are likely to cause considerable conflict of view amongst military experts, and it is thus difficult for the layman to judge of the feasibility or otherwise of the ideas laid down. It is, however, quite possible that the condemnation of dirigibles for purposes of defence and attack may be a trifle premature. We shall no doubt hear much more of this issue in the near future, but at the moment the question is obviously one for experts. General Mitchell may have over-emphasised the value

NOTES OF THE DAY

"DOCUMENTARY" FILMS

The awarding of the Mussolini Prize to "Man of Aran" at the recent International Festival of films at Venice is an important event in the history of the British cinema, for "Man of Aran" is an English picture. But it is an even more important event in the history of the world-cinema. For this is the first occasion on which an unequivocal victory has been gained by that type of film called "documentary." The cinema as it is known and loved by the masses of the people is a cinema of stars and stories. The usual commercial film, from Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin to Greta Garbo and Lionel Barrymore, has been an individualistic affair, centring itself round one or two people whose adventures have been made the pivot of its plot. But there is another kind of picture, slowly pushing its way forward, which is not concerned with individuals at all. It is interested in ideas, in organisations, in national entities, in industries, in occupations, rather than in single men and women, and it strives to isolate the essential qualities of these things, and give them permanent artistic expression on the screen.

RISEING TIDE

Thus, a recent English picture called "Rising Tide," composed of material left behind from newsreel narratives of the construction of the new Southampton graving dock, is an attempt at conveying that sense of the revival of trade and the return of prosperity which at the present moment is a marked feature of English life. A French film, "Le Mille," tries to capture the essential temper of athletics, whilst "Man of Aran" itself aims at embodying in film and music the dominating impression made by those hardy islanders on whose fierce wind-assailed coasts the Irish dramatist, J. M. Synge, wrote a memorable book. Hitherto, documentary films have been chiefly the favourites of somewhat highbrow coteries; but the winning of the Mussolini Prize suggests that soon they may come to gain a wider audience, and thus to modify in an important way the development of the commercial cinema.

THE STATE AND ART

The recent decision that in future no British Government entertainment tax is to be paid by the Old Vic and Sadler's Wells theatres in London has been warmly welcomed by all those who are concerned for the welfare of culture and art. To the two theatres themselves, which every year provide a nine months' repertory of Shakespeare, opera, and ballet, interspersed with a few modern plays, the remission of tax is of tremendous importance, for it is understood that it is this Government impost which has hitherto prevented them from achieving a sound financial basis. In spite of the popularity and excellence of their performances. But the implications of the event go far beyond the theatres immediately concerned. This is said to be the first occasion in history on which the British Government has officially marked out one branch of dramatic activity from all the others, and decided to afford it encouragement. Already enterprises like the Stratford-on-Avon Festival Theatre and Mr. Sydney Carroll's Open Air Theatre in Regent's Park, which both play Shakespeare almost exclusively, are very justly inquiring whether the quality of their work, and the educational importance of their activities, does not entitle them to similar consideration. Britain as a whole has not yet made up her mind whether the constant fear of financial disaster, alternating with hopes of brilliant success—this being the background of her current theatrical system—is a good or a spur. Government care for the drama would spell security; might it also mean apathy? But it is felt that, whether or not the Government in future assists the drama, it should leave it absolutely free to develop in its own way.

of the dirigible, but, at the same time, there may be something of value in the arguments which he and those who think with him have advanced.

FORGOTTEN MILLIONS OF CHINA'S INTERIOR

By ROLAND H. SHARP

In The Christian Science Monitor

WANDER DOWN any side lane away from beaten tracks of westernised Chinese cities, and centuries retreat before you like mirages.

Follow inland beyond the fringe of ports to mud-walled villages of the forgotten millions. Around you surge the rolled but slowly changing social currents of Chung-huo, Middle Kingdom of Oriental antiquity.

Here China of the masses lives, toils and plays under the Republic, much as it did when the Dragon sceptre ruled from amid gold and crimson pillars in the now discredited regal Peking.

Noise and apparent confusion reign wherever the millions seek a livelihood. Hawkers chant their wares in narrow streets to the accompaniment of weird, penetrating notes twanged on endless varieties of tuning forks, coiled musical springs and cymbal-like bells.

"Li-fa-chiang, li-fa-chiang!" bawls the itinerant barber, striking a metallic coil on his red box of utensils. "Zing... ing... ing... ng... g... g... g..." the coil sings vibrantly like a cascade droning away into summer distances.

Each trade has a sound all its own. Gradually Occidental ears come to make out this call of the wandering barber, as well as that of bean curd vendors, and of the man who sells hot water from tubs on a wheelbarrow. Gradually, too, the confusion of sound and movement unfolds its rhythms in a strange but recognizable tempo.

Out of the clamour rises a familiar sound. Anvils clang in dark shops where boys fashion deep copper pots from flat metal. That complaining woody creak rises from wheelbarrows straining over mud ruts and loaded nearly to the heads of their pushers. Water splashes from long wooden tubs on some of them, despite intent-eyed juggling by their helmsmen.

Bronzed shoulders jog patiently beneath poles that bite deep with weight. In petty commerce, on the land, in workshop and store, the millions work with implements left by their fathers of immemorial hour. Modern machines have hardly begun to lift loads from backs and torsos that surge erect in statuesque lines, or sag with the slow insistence of never-ceasing burdens.

Light down to the sea, farming claims the dragon's share of Chinese energy. Eight millions in ten till the land. Their blue jackets in the north, and black in the south, bend over ocher silt in river plains or dot terraced slopes of mountains barren in the sun.

Across the land man and beast toil together. Oxen and a few camels in the north, water buffalo in the south, donkeys everywhere plus a sprinkling of horses and mules, pace their rutted ways. The buffaloes play at their work, sleek and rippling with surplus strength.

In a country of titanic distances, large estates are almost unknown. Statistics can do little more than indicate trends in China, and their accuracy is always in question. Yet the best available show 70-80,000,000 farmers in a population of roughly 450,000,000. With their families they account for most of the millions, living on morasses of land sandwiched in odd patches among those of their neighbours. More than 25,000,000 families depend upon produce of less than 1.5 acres apiece. Another 18,200,000 have less than 4.3 acres. Average farm incomes range from £7 to £40 a year.

On small farms in Kwangtung Province, 55 to 66 per cent. of crops drains away as rent. Similar proportions are reached in Hupeh, Kiangsu and Hunan. Yet oddly enough, the millions have clung to their land until the landholding peasant stands forth as the typical figure. He overshadows the landless proletariat. Occupying owners are estimated at 50 per cent. of the 70,000,000 farmers; part owners, 20 per cent. and tenants, 30 per cent. The proportion of peasant owners is higher in the north than in the south.

Escaping as they do the heaviest pressure of landlord yokes that have marked other peasant economies, the millions fall into the hands of dealers and money-lenders. After harvest they must sell—say rice—at £2 a picul (133.3 pounds). In the spring, they buy it back at £5. When they seek credit, interest rates are at 9 per cent. or more a month.

Under these and other exactions the Chinese peasant has shown remarkable endurance without revolt. Except for eruptions with a communistic tinge in individual provinces such as Hunan and Kiangsi, largely against rents and money lenders, there has been no peasant revolution. The revolution of 1911 was bourgeois, the work of an extreme minority. The millions in their mud villages endure as they have for ages. Moreover, they show an infectious sense of humour and ability to lighten an otherwise intolerable existence by arts of play persisting through centuries of oppression.

This happy disposition shows itself as a welcome contrast in a social scene that appears mostly somber to Occidental eyes. There is laughter among the millions. They find joy in moments of lounging over plank tables of open-air tea houses beneath bamboo roofs. The sound of their talk is everywhere. They shout to each other as they pass while pulling rickshaws or dray carts. Fete days and processions bring colour and emotional relief to the round of toil in town and countryside.

Villagers are shy when strangers pass through, but there is a manner of approach that melts the shyness. Furtive smiles come, then nods and greetings. No matter if the language jumbles forth in meaningless jargon. Without one word of Chinese or English in common, a whole village and I managed all the essentials of a friendly visit.

Down the one street came the stranger, a street rutted deep by paddings of camel trains heading north from Peking into Mongolia. Crouched in the sunlight, a man braided mats from split bamboo with deft fingers. Equally swift the fingers of a small boy, whose sister divided her attention be-

Mr. Swift:—

Sir—In writing to you as one of the real strictly, fresh egg dealers, I want to tell you that now is your time to put up the price on your eggs, as the molting season is on and if you want to get your best results, this is your time as in a few more weeks, the forward layers, will soon be laying;

But the 12 weeks is also the time to rest in, so as the 9th of February—is the time for Mercury, to begin in full blast, so make the best of it much as you can.

At this time (7 cents each, is little enough, and on the NEW MOON, in Nov. then 8 cents, and up) I have been since November, 1893, at this work; and my mother before me, so I do know what I am talking about.

Trusting you will understand.

I am yours very, truly,

SOCCER COACHING SCHEME

English F. A. To Make
Sound Film

Schoolboy footballers all over the country will soon reap the benefit of the Football Association's backing for the instructional classes for boys. When the F. A. decided to give their blessing to the scheme all doubts about the success of it were dispelled.

No time has been lost by the ruling body in getting down to business. The Committee of the F. A. has agreed that the services of two coaches should be available for each County Football Association. The appointment of such coaches is to be left to the respective association.

The remuneration of such coaches, in cases where remuneration is required—there are bound to be enthusiasts willing to give their services voluntarily to such a scheme—shall not exceed one and a half guineas per session and railway fares actually paid. If a demonstrator is required he shall be paid one guinea per session.

The F. A. Committee has also decided to recommend to the Council the approval of the production of an instructional sound film, the cost not to exceed £1,000. The film, however, will not be ready until next season.

At its last meeting the Council voted a further £500 to the Coaching Scheme.

The making of the film, although a sound idea in theory, is thought by many to be impractical. It is pointed out that many of the schools have not reached the stage where they can possess sound equipment. It may be, however, that the F. A. intend to supply the projecting apparatus with the film.

The final of the Shanghai Golf Club ladies' singles tournament played on Sunday at Kiangwan resulted in a win for Mrs. Gordon by 5 up and 3 to play.

THE RUGGER CODE

CLUB XV DEFEATS
ARMY SIDE

Patchy play, with the Club dominating the exchanges throughout most of the game, featured the Army versus Club rugger match at Sookunpoo on Saturday when the Club chalked up another win by two goals, one penalty goal, two tries (19 Points) to one goal (5 points).

There were however, several good individual performers. Hewitt, of the Borderers, at the base of the Army scrum, played an outstanding game for the Service side, but the "threea" failed to make full use of the innumerable openings he gave them.

For the Club, McLellan was prominent in the three-quarter line, his goal kicking and tackling being of a high order. McGilchrist was also in form, exhibiting a fine turn of speed which carried him throughout without much opposition. He opened the score after ten minutes play for McLellan to majorise. Riggs crossed the line shortly afterwards with another try for the Club which McLellan converted. McLellan was again conspicuous before the interval when he landed a beautiful penalty goal.

In the second half Munro increased the Club's lead with an unconverted try, and Gilchrist went over for his second try before the Army came into the picture and Stilson crossed the Club line following a clever run. Ward added the extras.

"A" TEAMS GAME.

In the "A" encounter between the two sides the fortunes were reversed, the Army easily accounting for the Club XV to the tune of two goals, one try (13 points) to nil.

Simmonds scored twice for the Army in the first half and majorised both efforts. After the interval Hutchinson put the Army further ahead with a try scored between the posts. Howell failed to convert.

SATURDAY'S SOCCER

CONDUCTED BY "VERITAS"

DON'T ABUSE A GENIUS! THE CLUB & ALBERT HOWE

DANGER OF EXPECTING TOO MUCH
FROM GREAT SCORING MEDIUM

POLICE CONTENTED AND THE NAVY
FULFIL A PROPHECY

A GOOD pastime for an indefatigable optimist at the moment would be to go round the Colony attempting to get odds against South China first string winning the league championship this year.

THEIR performance on Saturday in wiping the floor with the Club appears to have finally convinced a large number of enthusiasts that the team has as good as won the title.

I AM inclined to the same idea, but not for the same reason. Although in beating the Club, South China laid a bogey, and at the same time revealed their full potentialities as successors to the Borderers for league honours, it is a little premature to make this as the be-all and end-all of the competition for the championship.

SOUTH China's victory was, perhaps, a little more decisive than one expected, but that they won was pretty well in accordance with general anticipations.

THE secret was they chose to play the right kind of football. The type of football for which they have no superiors and few equals in Hongkong. In brief it was businesslike. It was the same sort of game which saw them upset the Borderers at the first time of asking this season.

THE Club put up a jolly good resistance, and their early goal was sufficient to add the necessary impetus to a game which had, before its commencement, been eagerly anticipated.

IS a suggestion permissible to the Club? If so, it is this. Don't make the mistake of abusing Albert Howe's genius for scoring goals. I well remember Everton making the same blunder with Dixie Dean after he had broken a record in 1927-28 by scoring 60 goals during that season.

EVERTON became obsessed with the idea of Dean scoring goals, and applied tactics which suggested he was the only player in the forward line capable of netting. The result was the eclipse of Dean for nearly two seasons.

THERE is a tendency on the part of the Club to ply Howe with passes a little too often. The result is he becomes the target of an entire defence. It is the subtleties of football which contribute chiefly to success; make an obvious move, and it is easily anticipated and defeated.

I AM not suggesting that Howe, and Howe only, is nurtured by his colleagues. But it might be a fruitful move to fling the ball among the other forwards rather more often. Because Howe has now become such a dangerous attacker, he must of necessity receive closer attention from opposing defences, which position could be turned to good advantage by the Club, if they make their passes with a little more discretion.

HOWE is the best scoring medium the Club has had since Yvonne Segalen. Segalen's talents were blunted because he was overfed with passes, and consequently severely marked and hampered. The Club would do well to refrain from making the same mistake twice.

IT was splendid to hear of the return of A. V. Gosano. My earlier report of a probable absence from the field for the rest of the season was no wild rumour, but it is most consoling to discover that "A.V." has risen above his injuries and is back among the "active participants."

HIS return was the signal for a smart Recreio victory at the expense of the Royal Artillery, a team of parts, admittedly, but some very good parts none the less.

THE Recreio forward line was 100 per cent. improvement on the last fortnight, and although Pardoe gave a classic understudy performance of Podmore, there was no stopping the Gosano brothers, and that piece of lightning, Alves, who promises to be a left-wing "discovery."

TO have a defence commit two blunders in the first five minutes both from which goals resulted, is enough to upset the equilibrium of any team. It therefore, the Police had lost by several goals against the Lincoln on Saturday nobody would have been frightfully surprised.

BUT the Police, presumably (and happily) endowed with a different sort of equilibrium to you and me, found encouragement in such a set-back and proceeded to outplay the Lincolns, and finally to snatch a really excellent win by the odd goal in five. Great work you Officers!

Major General Borrett, accompanied by Syd Strange (captain), shakes hands with the Rest team before the start of the Armistice Day charity football match. (Photo: Met Cheung).

Armistice Day Charity Match

The attendance at the Armistice Day charity football match between the United Services and the Rest of the Colony was meagre owing to the inclement weather.

From the kick-off the Rest began to apply pressure but the greasy ball and heavy ground did not help matters the nippy forwards complaining the forward line of the South China team with one exception, finding these conditions most difficult.

Changes were made in both teams as several men could not appear, but the reserves were none the less good value for their respective sides.

The Services were well served in the intermediate line but their forwards needed a little more speed and combination for the finishing touch.

The two goals by which the Rest won were scored during the first half of the game, through well calculated efforts of the forwards, who were just that little too quick for the Services defence.

For the Rest, Rodger and Sid. Strange, both of the Club combined well letting nothing past, and although the Services applied pressure during the last twenty minutes, shooting at all angles and from close range, Rodger's uncanny anticipation prevented what might have been a very different result.

No scoring eventuated in the second half in spite of the fact that a bombardment by the Services was kept up to the end.

TSUI WAI PUI BEATS LAI KWONG TSUN

BUT RUMJAHN LOSES FIFTH
SET TO BODIKER

HONGKONG LEADS TWO SETS TO LOVE
IN DOUBLES: LEFT UNDECIDED

(From Our Own Correspondent)
(By Telephone)

Canton, Nov. 12.

HONGKONG made a glorious effort to snatch the tennis Interport from Canton yesterday, when, after facing a deficit of two rubbers, Tsui Wai-pui beat Lai Kwong-tsun in a five set duel, and S. A. Rumjahn forced George Bodiker to the fifth set. But Bodiker proved his master after a wonderful game, and clinched the final set to love, and with it the Interport honours.

The doubles encounter was left undecided, with Ho Ka-lau and H. D. Rumjahn leading by two sets to love and 2-3 in the third set. Canton thus won the contest, and retained the trophy by three rubbers to one, Lai Kwong-tsun and Bodiker having won their initial singles last Saturday.

EARLY MATCHES DESCRIBED

How Lai Repeated A Triumph

Canton, Nov. 11.

In spite of a drizzling rain, quite a number of people turned up at the Central Park to watch the Interport tennis tournament yesterday. The Tournament opened with the match between Tsui Wai-pui and G. Bodiker. Bodiker playing at the top of his form won the first set to love, although actually the conditions were favourable to the Hongkong player from the fact that the courts were slightly wet and slowed up the game. Tsui was more consistent in the second set and after a struggle won it 6-2. From this point Bodiker predominated the play and after a most interesting struggle won the next two sets 6-3, 8-6. Bodiker was in such good form that Tsui actually did not have time to settle down and although playing really good tennis, was never in the picture and the rallies were short.

The second match between S. A. Rumjahn and Lai Kwong-tsun was rather more interesting from the spectators' point of view, the rallies being long with fast play throughout. It was mostly a base line game, though Rumjahn took the net on several occasions and brought off brilliant smashes and volleys, but on the whole Lai was much the sturdier and often able to pass on both hands.

Lai's placing was so accurate that the Hongkong player was kept on the run and forced into a defensive game. He retrieved brilliantly on many occasions but Lai was too good. Towards the end of the fourth set when the games were 4-3 to Lai the match had to be stopped on account of Rumjahn developing cramp in the Hongkong faced a serious situation yesterday morning. They were two matches down and Canton required only the first singles in the morning to clinch the match.

Tsui Wai-pui, Hongkong champion, who lost to Bodiker on Saturday, opposed Lai Kwong-tsun, and it was generally felt that Lai would prove too good for the victor.

But Tsui played with rare determination and great skill to beat Lai 1-0, 6-4, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3. Tsui started shakily and then gained confidence, overhauling Lai in the third set. The Canton champion retaliated by annexing the fourth, but Tsui brought all his resources into effect in the fifth stanza, and brought off a spectacular victory.

THE DECIDING MATCH.

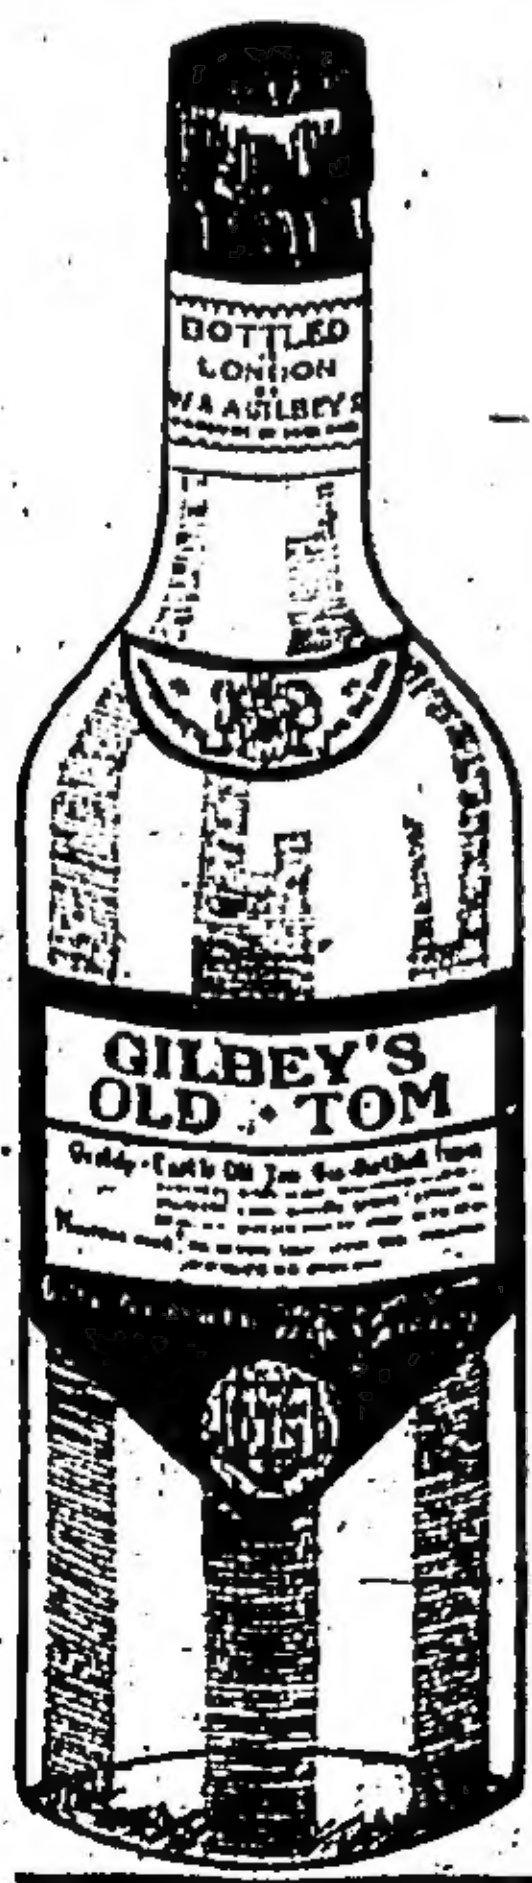

It now only needed S. A. Rumjahn to beat Bodiker for Hongkong to be practically certain of winning the series, as the doubles was almost foregone in its result.

Appreciating this Bodiker played his best, yet only after a very bad start which saw him lose the first set to love. Asserting himself, and keeping Rumjahn away from the net, Bodiker secured a delightful length in his driving and added pace as the match progressed. He won the second set at 6-2, and the third after a tense struggle at 9-7. Sirdar regained some control in the fourth set, and levelled the score by taking it at the ninth game. In the fifth set he went to pieces, and Bodiker, playing well within himself, achieved a notable triumph by winning it to love. The scores in Bodiker's favour read 0-6, 6-2, 9-7, 3-6, 6-0.

log, but after a few minutes of attention and massage, the game was resumed. Lai winning the match by 6-3. The actual scores were 6-1, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3 to Lai. (Continued on Page 9).

MORE SERIOUSLY

London. Although he is now a film star and his wife renowned on the screen, Johnny Weissmuller does not forget that he still holds six world's swimming records, three Olympic titles, and numerous other championships in every corner of the world. Weissmuller is now in London and he has confided to Reuter's his views on modern swimming. "Seriousness," he said, "is the keynote to success. To-day seriousness is lacking and the standard of swimming is at a low ebb. I doubt whether it has been lower for years. That is all wrong when you remember that science has been applied to the art. Swimming should be progress; progress all the way, with records smashed every year."

"The Japanese have the right idea. They start swimming as children and they develop enthusiasm. I think they are the coming swimming nation of the world. England should be a strong swimming nation, despite the disadvantage of the climate here. The reason you are not, I think, is because you prefer to dabble in all branches of sport, and specialise in none. You must specialise to be good. We do in America, and results have proved we are right."

SERIAL STORY

The Clue Of The Forgotten Murder:

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

"CHARLES MODERN, reporter for The Blade, telephoned the newspaper a report of the death of EDWARD SHILLING, a well-known detective, believed to have been killed by 'CINCINNATI' BOB LAMPSON, gangster."

The same night an importer, pretending to be FRANK B. CATHAY of Riverside, wealthy and prominent, is brought to police headquarters on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. With him is a girl who says she is MARY BRIGGS, hitch-hiker. Both are released.

Modern telephoned the facts to his newspaper. Next day the real Cathay calls on DICK KENNY, city editor of The Blade. Cathay claims his reputation has been injured, and demands damages, and a retraction.

DAN BLECKER, junior publisher of The Blade, sends Modern to Riverside to learn all he can about Cathay. Next day MRS. CATHAY, attractive and youthful, calls on Blecker at his office.

CHAPTER V

Mrs. Cathay straightened. Her eyes ceased to smile and there was a swift rushing impetus to her words as she went on:

"I'm going to speak frankly, Mr. Blecker, because I can see that you're a business man, and that you like plain, frank dealing. I understand from my attorney that when an influential citizen files a libel suit against a newspaper the newspaper immediately starts digging into his past, trying to find some old scandal or something that can be dug up. Is that true?"

Dan Blecker met her gaze with sombre savagery in his black eyes. "Of course that's true," he said. "We're publishing a newspaper. We work at high speed. We try to keep from making mistakes. Occasionally we make a mistake. That's all it is—just a mistake. If we injure somebody we do everything we can to rectify that injury. We publish a retraction. If it's a very serious injury we file the fact away in our minds. We try to give that man a break some time. We try to make it up to him."

"If a man wants to fight us, then we fight him. You know and I know that nobody was ever damaged by a libel that was the result of an innocent mistake. That is, there was never any damage done that couldn't be rectified by a retraction. We're always willing to publish a retraction when we're in the wrong. When a man wants to capitalize on our misfortune we fight."

"When we fight, we fight. We use every weapon that we can get our hands on."

"Do you," she asked, "think that it's fair to hit below the belt?"

"When a man starts fighting us, we fight him," Blecker said. "If he kicks at us, we kick at him. If he gouges in the knuckles, we gouge. If he hits below the belt, we hit below the belt."

"But," she said, "suppose you shouldn't be able to find anything derogatory to a man's character?"

"Blecker snorted. 'We're all of us human. You take a man who goes to a city and becomes a prominent citizen and he gets a lot of boot licking. The first thing he knows, he's trying to live up to it. He hasn't got guts enough to come out and be human and admit that he's a human being like the other folks. A certain type of small town likes to play up to that sort of a man.'"

"Those are the men who always have something they want hushed up. We're all of us just about the same. We've got just about as much good and bad about us much in us."

"But my husband isn't like that," Mrs. Cathay said.

Blecker's retort was blunt. "Then what're you here for?" he asked.

"She made that quick, biting motion with her teeth and lower lip. 'You're making it very hard for me,' she said.

"You're making it hard for yourself," he told her. "Tell me what you've got to say and get it over with. It's these guineas, preliminaries of yours that are making the trouble."

She stared at him and took a deep breath. The animation faded from her face. Her eyes ceased to sparkle at him. Her voice no longer gave a suggestion of well modulated intimacy but was cold, flat, and final.

"Frank," she said, "is a fool. He had no business taking the stand he did. You publish a retraction; that's all there'll be to it."

Mrs. Cathay tapped lightly with gloved knuckles.

"Who says so?" asked Dan Blecker.

"I say so."

"What my husband says doesn't count," she said. "I have Mr. Charles Fisher of the firm of Fisher, Barr and McKendry in my suite at the Palace hotel. Mr. Fisher is my husband's intimate associate and attorney. He's been with him for years. He knows the world. They were in business together in South Africa before Frank came to Riverside. In fact Frank brought Charles Fisher to Riverside, put up the funds which sent him through law school and financed his first few years while he was building up a practice. It's only one of numerous good turns that my husband has done."

"Mr. Fisher will give you whatever legal assurances you wish that the matter will be dropped."

"Does your husband know you're here?" asked Dan Blecker.

Her face remained cool and expressionless. Her tone was blunt and final. "No," she said.

"I want to talk with him," Blecker said.

"It isn't necessary."

"I'm the judge of that."

"Won't you please come and talk with my lawyer?"

"Why should I?"

"It will save you a lot of disagreeable developments. It will save you from having a libel suit filed against you. It will perhaps save you thousands of dollars in legal fees if nothing else."

"If I don't come?" asked Blecker.

She laughed and the laugh was a mere, meaningless gesture, containing no mirth nor bitterness, as utterly meaningless as the goodbye kiss of a faithless wife.

"I'm trying to hand you an olive branch?"

"Why doesn't your attorney come over here?"

"Because," she said, "it wouldn't be the thing for him to do. It wouldn't look right. He prefers to remain in the hotel."

Dan Blecker had the reputation of never failing in an instantaneous appraisal of character. He was known for his ability to reach lightening decisions and express them in explosive monosyllables.

"All right," he said. "I'll go."

He pushed back his chair, jerked open the door of a small closet, pulled his hat well down on his head and struggled into an overcoat.

Mrs. Cathay's face remained expressionless but the shoulders of her coat rose and fell as she heaved a deep sigh. Blecker held the door open for her. She swept through the outer office, chin high in the air, eyes straight ahead. "Palace hotel?" Blecker asked.

"The Palace hotel," she said. "I have a car with a chauffeur."

In silence they entered the huge elevator which swayed slowly down to the street level. Blecker held the outer door of the office building open for Mrs. Cathay. A liveried chauffeur was standing beside a shiny black sedan. He opened the door with the snappy precision of a soldier on drill.

Blecker's eyes flashed to the man's face. It was a handsome face, and there was something ruthless about it, the arrogant pride of one who is only too conscious of his power. The expression of the face was in strange contrast to the marked military bearing.

Mrs. Cathay stepped lightly to the running board. Blecker didn't bother with the formality of assisting her to enter the car but, when she had entered, dropped to the cushions beside her. The chauffeur regarded Mrs. Cathay with a glance of steady inquiry. She raised her eyes to his and gave an almost imperceptible nod of the head. The chauffeur smiled, a change of expression. The eyes did not flash. The chauffeur's hand, which was a mere upturning of the lip corners, the eyes did not flash. The chauffeur's hand, which was a mere upturning of the lip corners, the eyes did not flash.

Crossing the lobby, Mrs. Cathay seemed agreeably conscious of the admiring eyes which followed her. She went directly to the elevator, entered the cage and stood very erect against the padded side of the elevator. Blecker entered, removed his hat. The cage door slammed shut.

"Eighth floor, please," said Mrs. Cathay, and the cage shot smoothly upward with Mrs. Cathay's eyes fixed rigidly upon the glistening panels of the elevator, her figure held stiff and motionless.

When the cage stopped Mrs. Cathay led the way, without a single backward glance, to room 894. She tapped lightly with her gloved knuckles.

HONGKONG TRADE.

REPORTS BY IMPORTERS FOR PAST FORTNIGHT

The following reports have been supplied by importers to the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce:

Cotton Piece Goods & Fancy Cotton Goods. The following reports have been received:—No new business is reported but a few additional small quantities in quantities already bought have been booked. A few small sales of "spot" cargo, Greys and Whites have been done but the market remains very quiet.

The latest Cotton prices to hand are those of the 8th inst.:—

American Middling "Spot" 6.80d.
Egyptian Sakel, E.G.F. "Spot" 8.50d.

Another report states:—Market appears to have filled requirements for Spring Fancies and little or nothing in the way of new business in Cottons has been booked during the past fortnight.

Woolens.—Clearances of Woolens are still satisfactory but prices, although showing no further downward tendency, do not improve. Absence of up-country buyers is principally responsible as stocks are not heavy.

Further small shipments of Japanese Fancy Cottons, Yonotinas and Serges have arrived and are found to be satisfactory.

There are heavy stocks of Rayon Yarn and prices have declined owing to more intensive anti-smuggling activities and further large seizures of cargoes.

Cotton Yarn.—Market dead with most of the mills working half-time or closed.

Another report states:—The better tone recorded in last report has not been maintained, and market values for most stocks are inclined to sag.

Sales of "spot" Serges are reported at very low prices, but quantities involved are small. Hosiery Yarn stocks still fail to attract the attention of dealers.

The situation in regard to Rayon remains virtually unchanged.

Metals.—Metal business is decidedly more brisk—stocks are much reduced. Prices should improve shortly.

Flour.—Stock: 100,000 bags. Market: Quiet.

DETECTIVE ATTACKED

SHOOT ASSAILANT BUT IS BADLY INJURED

Swift retribution overtook a coolie who last night assaulted a Chinese detective in the vicinity of Shing Mun Valley.

The detective, No. 409 (Ying Chun) drew his revolver and shot his assailant fatally.

Both men were removed to Kowloon Hospital where the detective still lies in a serious condition. The other party, an odd job coolie employed at Shing Mun works, was unidentified late last night. He was found to be dead on arrival at the hospital and was taken to the mortuary.

Details of the killing are not to hand but it is supposed to have taken place round about midnight and a number of European detectives from Taun Wan were investigating on the spot for some hours following the incident.

They called her OLD MAID.
She's MRS. now!

Lipstick intensifies natural color... brings the beauty men admire.

LIKE all fastidious women, she refused to look painted. But for awhile, she made the mistake of using no lipstick... with the result that her lips were pale; old-maidish. Every woman should avoid a conspicuous painted look. Men don't like it. But now it is possible to give lips the youthful color men admire without making a painted appearance. It is Tangee Lipstick, for Tangee contains a magic color-change principle that intensifies your natural coloring.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE. In the stick Tangee looks orange. But put it on and notice how it changes on your lips... takes on the one shade of rose most becoming to your coloring... the natural shade for you. Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base so that it soothes and softens lips while it adds to their allure. Prevents lips from drying or chapping. Also in Theatrical, a deeper shade for professional use.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look... make the face seem older.

PAINTED—Don't risk that faded look. It's reassuring and men don't like it.

TANGEe—Intensifies natural color, restores youthful appeal, ends that faded look.

NEW! Improved Tangee Container—Instantly detect and correct instantly dried and faded lips. No more case of smudged, beautiful, moist case. Has full mirror top and brush.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

In the recent Masters' Team-of-Four Championship, Charles A. Hall of Cincinnati and Louis J. Haddad of Chicago established a record for precise bidding.

However, no bridge player is infallible, and to-day's hand is one of the few on which Messrs. Hall and Haddad failed to reach the right contract. I shall not attempt to justify their bidding on this particular hand, but it does serve to show how errors in bidding sometimes may be offset by resourceful play, combined with a little luck.

The Play
The king of hearts was led, and as soon as Hall saw the dummy he realized that his contract was a difficult one, which could be made only through a most fortunate arrangement of cards. He therefore planned his play to take full advantage of whatever gifts the gods of chance provided, and hoped for the best.

After winning the first trick
with the ace of hearts in dummy, Hall led a small spade. When East did not cover, the nine spot was finessed successfully.

Hall next entered dummy with the jack of clubs and returned another small spade. This time East put up the ace, and returned a heart. Declarer has several optional methods of play from this point, but he elected to discard a small diamond rather than shorten his trump.

West led another heart, which Hall conceded by again discarding a diamond.

The best defence is to continue the heart suit, forcing declarer to ruff with dummy's last trump, and thereby preventing another spade finesse. On this heart led, declarer discarded a club. Two rounds of diamonds were taken,
the finesse being successful, and this was followed by two rounds of clubs.

Today's Contract Problem
The following hand was played by Miss Elinor Murdoch, first ranking woman bridge player of the United States, at a seven spade contract. West opened the jack of clubs. Can you play the hand for a grand slam?

ISAKO CIRCUS

LADY PEEL ATTENDS GALA
PERFORMANCE

Lady Peel, attended by Captain
R. F. Walter, A.D.C., and accompanied by Lord and Lady Malcolm Douglas Hamilton, was among the distinguished gathering present at the Isako Circus, Wanchai, on Saturday night, when a special programme was offered in aid of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. His Excellency, Sir William Peel, was unable to attend owing to indisposition.

Mr. D. Davies, Vice-President of the S.P.C.A., and Mrs. Davies, were also present.

The performance was well attended, and the spectators made frequent expression of their appreciation.

Perhaps the most impressive item on the programme was the flying trapeze work. Competent critics agree that the "family" now with Isako's circus give a polished performance, with difficult variations and absolute sureness.

Less exciting, but equally breath-taking, are the "balancing feats of the Palm Trio (recently at Queen's Theatre) who perform at the dizzy top of a long pole that nearly touches the top of the tent.

The troupe of four clever Cosack riders once again thrilled the audience with their daring and skill. The programme throughout was successfully presented.

The wild animal act was well presented, the ringmaster getting the lions and a tiger to perform without the use of a whip.

Mr. Franz Isako himself appeared in the ring and directed a delightful performance with his cleverly trained ponies.

ITALIAN RECEPTION
BIRTHDAY OF KING
CELEBRATED

The birthday of the King of Italy on Saturday was observed locally by a reception at the Italian Consulate by Commander
A. Bianconi, Consul General, and attended by representatives of many nations.

His Excellency the Governor
was represented by Capt. R. F.
Walter, A.D.C., and His Excellency
the G.O.C., Maj.-Gen. O. C. Borrett
by Captain B. L. E. Hebert, A.D.C.

Cmdr. Bianconi said: It is a great pleasure for me to thank you for your presence here on the anniversary of the birthday of His Majesty the King of Italy. Since the War under the leadership of the Savoy dynasty and in the inspired spirit of Fascism and the genius of a great statesman, the world has been able to witness the growing importance acquired by Italy in the Council of the nations. During this period stress has been laid on the traditional friendship between Italy and the United Kingdom as a cornerstone of our politics in Europe and abroad. In pursuance of the same principle, we have attained a great understanding with the Republic of China which will very likely be furthered by the friendly gesture of raising the Legation in Shanghai to the rank of an Embassy.

The Consul then proposed the loyal toast.

Spokesman Replies.
His Honour the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, said he was acting as spokesman for the British residents of the Colony when he heartily endorsed the feelings of friendship expressed by Cmdr. Bianconi. Italy to-day was a bulwark for the peace of Europe, and he had pleasure in proposing toast to the health of the illustrious ruler of a great country.

forced to ruff with either the queen or the ten of spades.
Declarer promptly over-ruffed, winning the last two tricks with the king and jack of spades.
